

Two African kids who just started their new life in Las Vegas!

By Cassie Rice

In February 2010, my husband travelled to Uganda, a country in Eastern Africa and couldn't believe what he saw. Uganda is almost half-way around the world from Las Vegas. It is 11 hours ahead of us and is on the equator so there is a lot of humidity and almost always is at 80 degree temperatures.

He went to an orphanage (www.mlisada.com) where kids used their acrobatic and musical skills to help the orphanage make money and support hundreds of kids, but it was terribly poor and in need of so much. He called one day on his trip and said he wanted to adopt two kids to give them a future. We began the process of adopting the two boys who were in that acrobatic troupe. The process was long, difficult and expensive, but the boys made it to the U.S. 5 days before Christmas, 2010. What a Christmas they had! We woke up finding one of the boys lying under the tree investigating all the presents. To them this was amazing, to me I would be amazed at the refrigerator, the pantry, having ice, garbage pickup, paved roads and emissions standards, but to them they were just so excited to have new things. In Uganda they each had just a few articles of clothing.

What a change in their life. The contrast between life in the United States and life in Uganda is not even comprehensible for most of our citizens. Basic human needs are not met in Uganda. Electricity, trash, health services, government, police, regulations etc all have big problems and are rampant with corruption.

White people (called Muzungus) are sought after by the local people for services or to purchase things mostly because those are the people who have money and most of the richest people who live there are part of charitable organizations (NGO's). Because of the lack of education, kids don't have a future that can amount to much. In Uganda there's no such thing as working harder and making a better life for yourself. The infrastructure is such that it makes it near impossible to live a life that even the poorest people have here in the United States.

Our boys just started school here, have joined a soccer club and get to do gymnastics, hip hop and juggling. They went from no structure to the structure of our American kids. It has been a huge change and a big adjustment. It has been a big change for our family to go from two girls to two girls and two boys, but it is great to watch these kids experience for the first time, what all our kids take for granted.

My husband and I went to Africa as two regular people who wanted to help some kids who had a future with little hope and give them a chance at a real education and a life that may lead to them helping their country one day. There is such a large need in Africa, but we are at least giving two boys a chance at a changed life and for that they are very grateful. If you'd like to help out this orphanage, they are always looking for donations. Contact me at Gymcats@gymcats.com and I will let you know how you can help.

Cassie Rice is a world class gymnastics coach who lives in Henderson, NV and the proud mom of four children. Her articles appear frequently in ParentsGuide of Las Vegas.

Giving Feels Good

Not all gifts are tangible.

When you support Catholic Charities of Southern Nevada, your donation isn't just about giving money, clothes or a vehicle. It goes far beyond for the less fortunate Southern Nevadans.

You're giving the gift of hope. You're providing for people in need. You're helping a child make sure his first meal of the day isn't his last. You're helping a senior citizen who can't afford medicine get what he needs to maintain his health. You're helping keep a roof over someone's head.

Your donation goes toward the two dozen diverse programs that Catholic Charities offers. You'll be helping people all of ages from all backgrounds, regardless of race, religion or creed.

Catholic Charities assists families, including aiding with adoption services and WIC supplemental food programs for infants and children, respite care and companion programs for seniors, and social services programs providing emergency food, clothing, diapers, school supplies, rental assistance, utility payment assistance, counseling and more.

Food service programs ensure people are receiving necessary nutrition, and employment services and shelter are provided for those who have fallen on hard times.

In 2009, more than 730,000 meals were served to men, women and children at the St. Vincent Lied Dining Facility. Forty-eight children were placed in loving homes through adoption services. More than 2,000 people were counseled about their immigration rights. Thousands of hours of service were provided to 812 children in 41 different schools through the Foster Grandparent Program.

It's all about making a difference in the lives of less fortunate Southern Nevadans. That's what Catholic Charities has been doing for 69 years, and with your help, we can continue our mission to accommodate the needs of our community, while providing those most cherished gifts – hope and help.

To make a donation, please call 385-2622 or visit CatholicCharities.com.